

Government procurement price of enterprise ESS system in Pakistan

What is the internal environment of public procurement in Pakistan?

The internal environment of the public procurement regime in Pakistan is related to three key factors: individuals who make procurement decisions; processes which provide guidance to the practitioners; and controls which ensure justice, transparency and accountability.

How long do government tenders have to be advertised in Pakistan?

In Pakistan, government tenders must be advertised in national newspapers and the Pakistan Procurement Regulatory Authority (PPRA) website for a minimum of 15 days. This is mandated by Pakistani law, except for government-to-government contracts. The procurement rules, 'Public Procurement Rules, 2004', are well defined and can be found on the PPRA website.

Is PPP procurement a problem in Sindh & Punjab?

The federal PPRA Rules are silent regarding PPP procurements. At the provincial level, however, some progress has been made in Sindh and the Punjab. Line departments at both federal and provincial level suffer from capacity constraints as there is dearth of professionals having expertise of managing PPP transactions.

Which provinces have a procurement authority under PPRA?

Following the federal regime, all provinces i.e. Balochistan, Sindh, Punjab and Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, and regions with special status - Gilgit Baltistan and Azad Jammu Kashmir (AJK), have also established their respective procurement authorities though, with slight variations but majorly all in line with the federal PPRA rules.
